

Peter Kyriacopoulos is the Chief Policy Officer and serves as the principal public policy advisor to the Executive Director and the Board of Directors of the Association of Public Health Laboratories. He is also a frequent consultant to senior CDC leadership on federal legislative and regulatory activities.

Kyriacopoulos has a well-developed ability to identify policy matters that are important and demand action and distinguish them from those that should merely be noted and observed. Throughout the senior leadership of state and local governmental laboratories, among the CDC divisions with public health laboratory activity, and in the Washington, DC public health community, he is frequently sought out because of the value of his observations, insight and forecasting skill.

Prior to joining APHL, Peter was the federal government liaison for a succession of two Governors of Maryland and for the Governor of Michigan for a total of over thirteen years, and he spent almost a decade working on Capitol Hill.
