

Emily McCloskey is the NASTAD's Senior Director on the Policy and Legislative Affairs team. Since joining NASTAD in 2011, she has represented state and local HIV and hepatitis programs to Congress, federal government and partners, and national and community stakeholders, as well as managed NASTAD's Ryan White Program and Appropriations policy work. Emily co-chairs the Federal AIDS Policy Partnership's AIDS Budget and Appropriations Coalition, a coalition of national advocates and organizations dedicated to increasing federal resources for HIV, viral hepatitis and STD education, prevention, treatment and care, as well as the Ryan White Working Group, a coalition dedicated to the advancement of Ryan White Program legislative issues. Prior to NASTAD, Emily served as the Public Policy Associate at The AIDS Institute and received her B.A. in Politics and Media and Communications Studies from Ursinus College.
